Representative Nelson Says Interests Responsible for Attacks on Congress

WORK DONE IN SECRET
Newspapers Flatly Misrepresented Measure, Is Claim of Proponent

By Associated Press
Washington, D. C.—Advocating passage of the Howell-Barkley bill to abolish the railroad labor board, Representative Nelson of Wisconsin, Republican insurgent leader, charged in the house Monday that "certain great interests" were responsible "for the entire bombardment of opposition to which congress has been subjected."

The bill which was taken out of the hands of the commerce committee under the new house rules two weeks ago by a coalition of Democrats and Republican insurgents, came up for consideration Monday with proponents threatening a long night session, if necessary, to force action. In place of the railroad labor board it would set up a new system for adjustment of labor disputes in the transportation service.

The measure, he told the house, is designed "to require a settlement of technical disputes through competent boards of technicians, to require that the public shall have the right and power to mediate any disputes over wages and working conditions and that unsettled disputes shall be submitted to impartial arbitration."

Mr. Nelson quoted messages and press reports in support of his charge that the opposition "has been fostered solely by transportation interest naming the Railway Business association, the Great Northern railway, the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co., the Baldwin and American Locomotive Co., and others."

BILL IS MISREPRESENTED
"It is no accident," he declared, "that business associations and newspapers generally have flatly misrepresented the provisions of the Howell-Barkley bill and have protested against eliminating the public by a bill which substitutes a board of five public members for a present board of three public members and six partisans."

"The railway business association," he said, "must have an income of something like $75,000 a year from memberships alone, and it is quite evident that they can put a very large amount of money into opposition to legislation and that they can bring enough pressure to bear upon business associations and newspapers all over the country."

"Proponents of the legislation," he said, "have worked in the open" in an effort to convince the members of congress that all organized labor regards the Howell-Barkley bill as a constructive measure to maintain peace and harmony in a most essential national industry.

"The opponents of the bill have worked under cover, through secret agents," he charged, "they have insinuated their false statements to newspapers through secret channels of influence. They have operated through concealed agents, using unfair pressure and misrepresentation as the means for misleading and coercing members of congress to defeat this bill by any means, but particularly through preliminary strategies and tricks."

M'Adoo Supporters
Regard Oil Scandal
As Campaign Asset

Pre-convention Efforts to Win Influential Men for Former Secretary Are Being Intensified.

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1924 by The Post Pub. Co.
New York.—William Gibbs McAdoo has come to town at just the psychological moment. There are conferences now among Democratic leaders which may influence the whole trend of events at the Democratic national convention six weeks hence.

Mr. McAdoo and his associates are confident of the welcome. They neither look doubtful nor talk that way. Arrangements are being made for the convention itself—that is what has brought several national committeemen here—but the undercurrent of conversation is not who shall be temporary or permanent chairman or what the strategy of the convention will be.

The McAdoo men are sure of more than 400 votes on the first ballot. They say they have more votes in store on subsequent ballots. If they get a majority, they believe the whole convention will swing toward them and furnish the necessary two thirds.

OIL PILOT IS BOOMERANG
On what is all this confidence based? You can't talk five minutes with any of the McAdoo men before learning that they are absolutely convinced that the dragging in of McAdoo's name in the oil controversy has been a boomerang; that it is the kind of thing which Republicans will think harmful but which the Democrats will not. For in the first place, Mr. McAdoo feels he has done nothing wrong, that nobody has accused him of any legal wrongdoing and that his activity as a lawyer after he left the treasury department is no different from the activity of Charles Evans Hughes after he left the supreme court of the United States. Mr. Hughes, it is pointed out, argued before his former associates and was highly paid for his services.

But the McAdoo men say the oil discussion is "old stuff" and that the people in several state primaries have "passed" on it and given McAdoo their support.

ONLY DRY CANDIDATE

Another thing on which the McAdoo cohorts are not silent is prohibition. They point to him as the only "dry and progressive candidate." This seems of course a challenge to Governor Al Smith. Whether the McAdoo men can make of Al Smith a conservative by declaring Tammany is far from progressive, remains to be seen. But the fight appears to be developing largely between the McAdoo and Smith forces, with all sorts of rumors floating around just now that at the psychological moment both the Underwood and Cox strength will be thrown to Smith rather than McAdoo in order to head off the latter's nomination. The pre-convention efforts to persuade influential men behind the scenes to cast their support into the camp of William Gibbs McAdoo are becoming intensified. There was a time when the skeptics thought him eliminated on account of the oil mix-up. He has now carried several primaries and has come here to ask the doubtful ones what they think about that and to persuade them to climb his band wagon. For McAdoo is one of the chief strategists of his own campaign.

OIL EXPLOSION SPREADS BLAZE IN RAIL YARDS

Five Men Injured When Spark Ignites Gaseous Vapors from Tank Car

By Associated Press
St. Paul, Minn.—Five men were burned or otherwise injured, one probably mortally, when gaseous vapor from an oil tank car at the Craig Oil Refining Co., on the west side exploded, igniting a warehouse containing approximately $300,000 worth of highly inflammable oil products.

Carl A. Talcott, a state oil inspector, and Howard Selfert, an employee of the company were about to take a test of a car of gasoline when Talcott noticed vapors from the car traveling toward a nearby boiler room had ignited.

A spark, believed to have been generated when Peter Fishbach, an employee of the oil company, dropped the lid of the car into place is held responsible for the explosion and fire that followed. Fishbach who was enveloped by flames, is believed to have been fatally burned.

Scattered by the force of the blast, the burning oil started other fires near several storage tanks, and every available piece of fire fighting apparatus in the city was called in an attempt to prevent other explosions and spread of the blaze to nearby warehouses containing 1,000,000 gallons of oil and gasoline.

ARMY FLIERS HOP OFF AFTER 2-DAY WAIT ON JAP ISLE

Haze and Fogs Delay Departure of United States Globe Circlers

By Associated Press
Paramaribo, Guayana.—The American army fliers encircling the world sailed down on to Kashiwabara bay here Saturday morning in a snowstorm and Monday morning they mounted from the water and disappeared in the early morning fog.

The fliers had waited here since Saturday for good weather, that they might continue southward and westward on their journey. Sunday was a disappointment. Snow fell from time to time, and a biting wind blew continuously. The air men rested, and in the evening were entertained aboard the Japanese destroyer Kiteukaze, which had come here to meet them.

The early dawn came before 2 o'clock—found the fliers astray. The planes were fueled; the engines were started. The low hanging clouds threatened to make necessary another postponement but from the U. S. S. Pope, at Hitoakappa bay, Tel. profusely island and from the Japanese destroyer Kiteukaze, halfway between the two steps, came reports of excellent flying conditions.

The air cruiser New Orleans, took the air at 7:35 A. M., quickly followed by the Boston and the Chicago in order.

The take-off was easy. The air planes circled about once overhead. The flagplane Chicago took the lead, and all three disappeared in the morning haze.

This large paper will contain hundreds of suggestions for financing, building and furnishing a home which will be invaluable to the home builder. The movement to own your home is nationwide. ## HOME OF FARMER TOTALLY RUINED IN SUNDAY BLAZE

High Wind Baffles Fire Fighters at William Volkman Home at Black Creek

William Volkman's farm residence about three and a half miles south of Black Creek, was destroyed by fire at noon Sunday. The high wind made it impossible to save the building or the bulk of its contents and fanned the flames so the structure was burned to the ground within an hour and a half.

A defective chimney was the cause of the blaze. The loss will be several thousand dollars, only a small part of which is covered by insurance.

Mr. Volkman and son Orval attended church Sunday morning and Mrs. Volkman had just completed preparation of dinner when they returned. They saw smoke arising from the kitchen, where the fire made its start, but Mrs. Volkman was not aware of the blaze. The family attempted to extinguish it but the plaster in the kitchen fell and drove them outside.

Neighbors and the Black Creek fire department were summoned but were unable to save the house because of the fury of the flames. The direction of the gale was what saved the remaining farm buildings.

Part of the furniture downstairs was removed, but it was scorched badly. Everything in the upper story was consumed with the house.

Mr. Volkman had completed repairs on the house only recently.

Whoozit Contest

It took a boxing fan to identify the sketch printed last Thursday in the Whoozit contest conducted by the Post-Crescent. The number of completed drawings of Jack Dempsey, who was the subject of the sketch, was less than half as large as if Charles Evans Hughes and President Coolidge, subjects of the first two sketches.

The prize of $1 was awarded to Chester Johnston, 14, 847 State-st., for the best completed drawing of Dempsey. Johnston succeeded in drawing a fairly accurate likeness of the heavyweight boxing champion but he was hard pressed for honors by some of the other amateur artists.

Some of the sketches submitted indicated lack of care in preparation. If the boys and girls in this contest will spend just a little more time in carefully working out their drawings they will have a much better chance of winning the prize money.

The subject of the sketch is a world famous personage. He has made more people laugh perhaps than any other man who ever lived. His most pronounced characteristics are at his head. There are very few people indeed who haven't seen this famous personage when they sought entertainment.

The Post-Crescent will pay $1 to the boy or girl of 16 years and younger who will submit the best sketch with the missing features supplied before 6 o'clock Wednesday evening, May 21. Be sure you have identified the subject, then draw in his nose, mouth and other missing features as carefully as you can. It will be a lot of fun guessing who this is and still more fun to finish the picture.

Every boy and girl of 16 years and younger, excepting children of employees of the Post-Crescent, are eligible in this contest. Your father and mother no doubt will enjoy working with you in identifying this sketch. Send your completed drawings to the Whoozit Contest Editor of the Post-Crescent before 6 o'clock Wednesday night, May 21.

AMUNDSON URGES ORCHARD SPRAY TO KILL OFF INSECTS

County Farm Agent Suggests Mixture to Spray on Fruit Trees

This is the time for spraying home orchards for protection against insects and diseases, particularly apple scab and codling moth, according to Robert A. Amundson, county agricultural agent. Mr. Amundson has on hand valuable spray recipes, prepared by R. E. Vaughn of the state horticultural department, which he is passing along to orchard owners.

"The first spray should be given when the flower buds show pink, are separated in clusters, but when the blossoms are not yet open, and the second spray should be given as soon as nearly all the petals have dropped," it is advised.

"To make the spray the proper mixture, take one gallon of liquid lime and sulphur, one pound of lead arsenate and 40 gallons of water. These materials and the water should be strained, well dissolved, thoroughly mixed and applied in a fine mist like spray so every square inch of all leaf and surfaces of the fruit are completely coated with the film of the solution.

"Use a fine disc nozzle with high pressure for best results. If plant lice are present in sufficient number, a 'nicotine sulphate' solution be added to the spray solution. Remember that only those plant lice are killed which are actually hit by the nicotine sulphate."

If using the dry sulphur instead of the liquid form, follow the directions on the package, the county agent says. Usually from 3 1/2 to 4 pounds of the dry lime sulphur are the equivalent of one gallon of the liquid form.

Koch Sells House
A. J. Koch has sold a residence at 811 Rankin-st to Arthur Herwig, who is planning to move here from Neenah. The consideration was private.

man J. Franck, assistant postmaster, who is engaged in the semi-annual inspection of the rural routes.

Where fresh graveling was done last year, the roads have a good bottom and give no discomfort to the motorists, yet in other places traveling was so laborious that the carrier had to travel on low speed for a whole mile over a road covered with mud and water.

Postal equipment on the route is satisfactory except that boxes are in need of paint. Ninety percent of the boxes need to be painted.

Walter Swinkles, an 11-year-old boy who was knocked down and injured by an automobile driven by Karl H. ## 400 FARMERS AND LABORERS DISCUSS OFFICE CANDIDATES

Bachman Re-elected President of County Farmer-Labor Political League

All officers were re-elected at the meeting of the Farmer-Labor and Progressive league of Outagamie-co. Saturday evening with the exception of the secretary, Fred V. Helmenstam, who has been appointed county judge and therefore could not accept the political office.

The new recording and corresponding secretary is Anton Jansen of Little Chute. Fred Bachman of Appleton was re-elected vice president and William Eggert of Appleton, was re-elected treasurer.

About 40 farmers and laboring men attended the meeting in Trades and Labor hall. It was one of the largest meetings ever held by the league. The state and national political situation was discussed, but the only candidate endorsed for office was Congressman George J. Schneider for reelection to congress from the Ninth district.

The following were elected to the executive committee: Assemblyman Anton Miller, Buchanan, George Krickelberg, Grand Chute; William Deffording, Black Creek; Matt Brill, Kaukauna; William Struck, Appleton, and Otto Dahlke of Center.

In view of the fact that two counties are interested in the election of a state senator from this district, it was agreed to hold a joint meeting of Shawano and Outagamie-co's, in order to select a candidate to succeed himself. The meeting will take place in Trades and Labor hall of Appleton on Saturday evening, June 7.

A committee of seven members was appointed to look over prospective candidates for state senator and the two assemblymen of this county and make recommendations at the joint meeting on June 7. The committee is composed of Fred C. Ellington, Wildon Deffording, Black Creek; Edward Kirklin, Center; Joseph Murphy, Kaukauna; Herman Teske, Appleton; Assemblyman Anton Miller, Buchanan, and Assemblyman Charles Schimpf of Appleton.

ON THE SCREEN

RAY CREATES A NEW SCREEN CHARACTER

Through his incisive and deeply sympathetic portrayal of the role of John Paul Bart in "A Tailor Made Man," a United Artists release and the feature at the New Bijou today and Tuesday, Charles Ray has created an immortal screen character.

For this John Paul Bart of his is one of the most novel and intriguing characters in the annals of screen drama; a superman in a way, yet without the unnaturalness which so often seems to be the mark of distinction in a "different" character. Ray simply intensifies the humanism. John Paul Bart is simply a normal human being functioning at his truest and best, a clear thinker who has a talent for taking advantage of the favorable "breaks" of life.

Owing to Mr. Ray's ample revelation of the divine spark, "A Tailor Made Man" becomes more than just entertainment—it is a mental and physical tonic. Making no pretense

CHEER UP FOLKS, IT SNOWED IN APPLETON 30 YEARS AGO MAY 18

One of the worst snow storms of the year visited Appleton 20 years ago Sunday, May 18. The storm started at an early hour in the morning and more than eight inches of snow fell, a sheet storm, followed. Fruit trees were in blossom and as a result there was very little fruit that summer. Gardens were badly damaged.

At uplift, this photograph exalts and inspires because of the verve and gusto of its central figure, John Paul Bart. Here is a screen character that will live; and here is a bit of screen artistry that lends dignity and significance to the motion picture art. No one interested in the intrinsically superior photoplay can afford to miss seeing Charles Ray in his screen version of "A Tailor Made Man," the popular stage play of a couple of years ago.

CYTHEREA IS TRUE MIRROR OF REAL LIFE

An unusual story, alive with the flow and spirit of romance and adventure; settings and exterior of rare beauty; perfect acting and direction, and a theme of universal appeal.

That is the irresistible combination which was found in "Cytherea," Goddess of Love, which opened at the Elite theatre today for a 3 day engagement. It is a First National picture, presented by Samuel Goldwyn, and was produced and directed by George Fitzmaurice. The cast includes such popular players as Lewis Stone, Alma Rubens, Norma Kerry, Irene Rich, Constance Bennett, Betty Bouton, Charles Wellesley, Lydia Teamans Titus, Peaches Jackson and Mickey Moore.

"Cytherea" is a masterly romance; a genuine reflection of life. Appealingly human and splendidly enacted, the spectators will see themselves in the characters that move across the screen, so realistic is their portrayal of the roles they have been selected for.

One of the most exciting scenes ever filmed supplies the big thrill in the picture of Alan Sullivan's "The Rapids," which will be the attraction at the Majestic Theatre tonight. This thrill consists of a rescue from the very heart of the Rapids. Harry Morey, who plays the role of Robert Clarke, makes the daring rescue. In this he is forced to wage against a terrific current, buffeted by the swirling waters and is in great danger in many places of being thrown against the protruding rocks.

He rescues a baby which has been set adrift. Later, as the child grows up, the part is enacted by Baby Peggy Rice and, it is stated, an abundance of heart-tugs are supplied by the action of Baby Peggy and her "daddy" throughout the remainder of the story.

To successfully present this feat of daring and at the same time give the audience a realistic thrill, Mr.

PIG CLUBS HOLD 2 MEETINGS THIS WEEK

Further information in the care and feeding of pigs will be imparted at meetings of pig club groups on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. The meetings will be in charge of Robert A. Amundson, county agricultural agent.

Tuesday's meeting will be held in the Outagamie Rural Normal school at Kaukauna, while Wednesday afternoon's meeting will take place at the farm home of Frank O. Letts, Mackville-nd. An earlier announcement confused the dates.

All of the 154 school pupils enrolled have been supplied with the initial lessons and with record books on feeding. An itemized account of the quantity and cost of feed is kept. When the pigs are sold in fall the pig club members will repay the money they borrowed from banks and pocket whatever profits are made.

Morey was forced to go through this scene several times. He did this without the aid of ropes or any other arrangement for safety.

DANGERS OF A WEAK NAVY

Our naval experts figure that, to be reasonably well protected, our fighting fleet must be on an equal footing with England's and two-thirds stronger than Japan's. This program went into effect at the disarmament conference at Washington, giving Great Britain, United States and Japan the respective standings of 5-5-3. Lately there has been much discussion about the navy having fallen behind the 5-5-3 standards. Just what its actual fighting strength is, must be confusing to most readers. It is weaker in some classes of ships than in others. Elevations of guns, determining how far a shell can be fired, also enters into the discussion. The thing to keep in mind, however, is the navy as a whole—as an organization ready to give battle when attacked. In this connection, we must remember that no chain is stronger than its weakest link.

Our navy department announces that the relative fighting strength of the fleets of Britain, America and Japan is 5-4-3. Some experts go as far as to claim that the ratio is 5-1-3—that in actual battle strength our fleet is only a third as strong as Japan's and a fifth as strong as Britain's. This is the extreme view. The fact remains, however, that our navy is claimed to have become weakened—fallen below the relative standing that our best experts consider necessary for safety.

If, as claimed, the navy is weaker than is necessary for national safety, the thing to do is to bring it back up to its strength as agreed on at the disarmament conference—and do it quickly. Japan is building 84 fighting ships with a total displacement of 178,065 tons. The United States is building only 24 ships with tonnage of 64,494. This obviously means that we are headed toward even a weaker naval standing than at present. Congressional watchdogs of the public treasury, incidentally, before spending a lot of tax money should ascertain where truth ends and propaganda begins.

TRAGEDY ON THE STAGE

But a comparatively small number of persons remember Kate Claxton. She retired from the stage thirteen years ago. Then she was sixty-one. More than a generation ago she was one of the most popular actresses in the world. Not to have seen Kate Claxton in "The Two Orphans" or "East Lynne" was almost an unpardonable omission.

To young persons who are attracted by the charm of the footlights or the silver screen the misfortunes which attend upon fame form a lesson depicting the uncertainty and tragedy of success. Amid her triumphs, Kate Claxton, who died last week in New York, had a stormy life.

Bernhardt died recently while attempting to recuperate her fortune. Duse, as great as Bernhardt, died several weeks ago in Pittsburgh while on a tour to overcome threatened poverty in old age. Another celebrated actress, Clara Morris, a contemporary of Kate Claxton, lives practically as a hermit on the Hudson river, a few miles from New York city.

What is most remarkable in the characters of these women who experienced triumph in their careers was their capacity for combating adversity and rising above trouble. Even when all chance in hope seemed to be gone, and fame itself was dimmed by sorrow, they did not give up, but struggled as hard and as earnestly as they could.

Kate Claxton's whole life was filled with worry, though she spent her last years in comfort, as she received royalties on "The Two Orphans." "If tragedy comes," she told her friends, "live it down and look for a brighter tomorrow." That is excellent advice. Everyone goes through some tragedy in real life, the obscure as well as the prominent. Some work, yet never achieve fame or money; some seem to fail, over and over again by the very means with which others succeed.

The view to take of life is not that which looks to gain of any sort. No one ever knows how much good he is doing. The greatest success in life may lie in seemingly the worst failure. It is the work itself that counts, with the intent with which the work is done. How well do we work? That is the important question.

HALF-AND-HALF GOVERNMENT

Mr. Simon Michelet, a Washington lawyer, for a time secretary to the late Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota, has analyzed the presidential vote of 1920, the largest ever cast. He decides that the stay-at-home citizens can turn the tide in any election.

The total votes cast for all candidates in 1920 was 26,713,832, exceeding the total in 1916 by 8,000,000 and that of 1912 by 11,000,000. The number of citizens who failed to vote in 1920 totaled 25,705,063. For every 100 citizens who voted there were 96 who did not vote.

"The fact stands," says Mr. Michelet, "that the enormous stay-at-home vote of today is sufficient to change the result of the presidential election in a vast majority of the states. The stay-at-home army of 25,000,000 can elect or defeat any candidate. Upon the ability and efficiency of national and state committees in mobilizing the stay-at-homes and converting them into active electors hangs many an election."

Studying this analysis, which is acceptable, because Mr. Michelet is experienced in politics and is recognized as a dependable investigator, we arrive at the conclusion that we are a fifty-fifty nation. Approximately half of those who are eligible to vote exercise their privilege, while approximately half remain away from the polls.

It might be said that the balloting fairly represents division of public opinion, and results would not likely be different were all eligible citizens to perform their most important civic duty. But there are no grounds on which to make this deduction. On the contrary, it is probable that results would be different in many important ways, if the total vote were registered. Not only in presidential elections are citizens derelict. They ignore their duty in all elections. They are even more negligent in primaries than in elections, although they are aware that their opportunity to realize discrimination is presented in the primaries.

FORCE OF CHARACTER

Thousands of distinguished personages and humble folk traveled to the quaint old town of Malines the other day and honored Mercier, the great Belgian cardinal on the occasion of his golden jubilee. King Albert and Queen Marie were among the many who paid him homage.

A powerful drama will be written some day with Mercier as its leading character. This old man was a whole army by himself in Belgium's darkest days during the last war. As he grandly defied the German military lords, he personified the invincible spirit of national independence and human liberty. The people felt that they were indomitable if the brutes in silver helmets could not silence one earnest, gray-haired man, and the Prussian masters realized in their humiliating consternation that there was a force in the world mightier than cannon.

Not so long ago every man who blossomed out in a checkered suit in the spring was considered a gambler.

Many of us live expensively to impress our friends who live expensively to impress us.

So live that when the time comes you can retire instead of giving up.

A man on a vacation will spend more money accidentally than he will on purpose at home.

Now we will see if Babe Ruth has a steady job as home-run king.

Love thy neighbor, but be not too friendly with his garden tools.

Boston man thinks his wife kisses other men, so is asking for a divorce instead of feeding her onions.

Very few boys are as bad as the neighbors think or as good as their parents think.

The dollars that run the government also run the taxpayers.

This report about the rising generation going to the dogs is several million years old.

WHY YAWN?

Why do people yawn? asks a correspondent, who goes on to say: "I have spells of yawning and my throat is so stretched that it seems at times as if I will suffocate. It can't be lack of sleep for I get more than enough sleep."

Oxygen hunger.
So the desire comes on when you are fatigued, when the room is overheated or overcrowded and the air is foul, when your breathing grows more shallow from boredom or ennui.

Persons who feed flummily but exercise great care and ingenuity about avoiding work, honest muscular exertion, suffer from a sort of chronic under-oxygenation and are therefore unduly fond of yawning and unduly susceptible to the influence of example or imitation.

A spectator at the ball game is often constrained to yawn. Seldom, however, do you see a player yawn. He is getting the oxygen which the spectator, a sedentary person probably ought to have. Exercise increases the absorption of oxygen in the body; watching other folks exercise will not do so. Excitement helps to do so; stimulation, even though it be artificial, temporarily increases the absorption of oxygen, but the effect is very temporary indeed and not worth considering in actual practice. A tired business man—or woman—doesn't need an evening at the vaudeville hall as much as a few miles of oxygen on a bicycle.

Some fine business men figure that if that's all they need they can get it by the very simple means of deep breathing—which goes on show only how dulling to the mind oxygenation can be.

Another thing that makes you yawn sometimes is plain hunger. At least a hearty meal seems to overcome the desire to yawn, even though it makes you drowsy. Food, like exercise, increases metabolism. The effect of a half hour of exercise lasts perhaps half a day; the effect of a full meal lasts half an hour. So that one would have to eat about 20 full meals a day in order to obtain the metabolic boost one gets from two miles of oxygen on the metatarsal. And I suppose there are those who would rather get it that way.

So don't yawn, young woman. There's plenty of oxygen outdoors for all, and no reason why you should not absorb your share of it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Pernicious Anemia

The doctor pronounced my case pernicious anemia. Is that just an evasive term like nervous breakdown? (Mrs. H. G.)

Answer.—Pernicious anemia, is one of the essential forms of anemia; and the cause has not been discovered.

Henna

Is the use of pure henna injurious to the hair? I use it two or three times a year. (M. L. H.)

Answer.—Henna is a plant from Persia and India. The leaves are dried and powdered, and a tea made from them, for staining the skin and hair—a common practice in those countries. The dye is also used to stain wool imitation mahogany. So far as I know it is harmless as a hair dye.

Vaccination

Can a vaccinated person get the smallpox? Can a person get vaccinated more than once? One doctor said vaccination protects for life; another said it protects for seven years, and in proof of his contention he showed that persons could be successfully revaccinated after seven years and some persons who have had smallpox can be vaccinated after seven years. (Miss F. L. E.)

Answer.—The immunity conferred by an attack of smallpox is relative, not absolute, and possibly one could have a second attack. The immunity to smallpox derived from vaccination is also relative. No one knows just how long it lasts. To assume it lasts "seven years" is a case of superstition—the superstition that keeps some poor persons miserable with the itch for seven years because they have Ben Told it is "seven year" itch. Perhaps it is well to be vaccinated when you're a baby and then have another try at it any time afterward if smallpox is prevalent.

Dilated Venules

I am a man aged 25 years. I do outside work. I am troubled with a lot of small red and blue veins on my cheeks. Is there any known cause or remedy for this? (S. T.)

Answer.—I do not know the cause. Perhaps skillful treatment with the electric needle will obliterate the venules.

GETTING TECHNICAL

After the automobile manufacturers have put a few more controls on the wheel and the dash and have added a few more disguises for the feet to work, the only person who will be able to drive a car will be a man like Frank Taber.

Over on the Hortonville rd pigs can navigate as well as excavate, judging from the sign which a farmer has posted at his place: "Pigs for Sale."

The Unforgivable Sin

"Canes must be parked outside this church," is the notice which the pastor of a St. Louis church has served on his parishioners. We had thought that the only two things that a hick town cannot forgive is a secret and a cane. But St. Louis can't be very much bigger than Appleton.

Perhaps it would make motorists more cautious if locomotives used a tack out in front instead of a cow catcher.

It must be that a lot of children like to see the tractor at work opening the Lakest drawbridge, for one evening last week someone blew on a rubber hose to imitate a steamboat or barge. The whistle sounded so close the terrified workmen scampered in haste to open the bridge. After it was opened they looked for the boat, but the only thing they heard was something that sounded very much like a snicker.

"NO FISHING ALOUD," READS A SIGN ON THE WOLF. THAT'S WHAT WE ALL SAY.

BOBBED BOBBERS

The term "bobbed hair bandit" is entirely too general. Which bobbed hair bandit? We have hundreds of them right in Appleton, who are holding up something or other, who have stolen a march on their mothers and who have run away with some fellows' hearts.

A Cadillac car, young man, may squeak a little when it starts to work, but you will notice that after it gets interested it begins to SING.

It seems that dogs are contending with the chickens for the possession of Appleton gardens.

Metaphorically Speaking

"The tidal wave of democracy kindled by Wisconsin under La Follette is now sweeping westward." (From the Delavan Republican.) The Beloit News terms it "A Hot Water Movement." Can it be that this "sweeping compound" started boiling in the political pot? Far be it from us to pour cold water on the movement.

Judging from all the conferences that passed between Elmer Hall and a bunch of Oshkosh fishermen in the closed hook and line season, it might be well to change the name to "conversation commission."

Student Life Changed By War At Heidelberg

(St. Stephen, in Dnl, Berlin.)

In 1908 when I studied at Heidelberg the life of the town was governed in every detail by the university. It was not so much a university town as a town attached to a university.

All the residents seemed to live there exclusively in order to rent rooms to the students to feed them at the cafes and restaurants, to sell them books, to photograph them on foot and on horseback, singly and in groups with court-plastered scars on their faces, or with dogs; to keep their daughters from flirting too outrageously with students and yet to be proud of such romances; to nudge each other when meeting a famous professor on the street, and to retail to each other bits of academic gossip.

There was much that was pretty in this life, much that smacked of the provincial, but also much that was friendly and noble—Frank esteem for the professor, veneration for intellectual, spiritual labor respect and love for learning.

Today students are nowhere to be seen. True faded corporation caps and banners are still pinned to the restaurant walls. But they are dead relics—withered blossoms in a spiro-spiral's chamber. Of course, Heidelberg is still full of young men who attend lectures at the university. But they are not students in the old-time sense; they are no longer the pampered children of the town, who may do everything, to the everlasting enjoyment of everybody. They seem to wear magic caps that render them invisible.

Russian students, in particular, have changed entirely. There are many of them; but they do not stroll in groups up and down the Anlage; they do not argue—all at the same time—about socialization of land; proletarianization of the peasant; they no longer busy themselves despising every corps student who passes them and whom they think more stupid than his own bulldog. Indeed the corps student also has suffered a mysterious eclipse.

Bridal Customs Of Ancient Egypt

(From The Pathfinder.)

Brides of ancient Egypt prepared for the wedding day by dyeing finger and toe nails with "henna." Baths in perfumed oils and painting of the face were also part of mummy's toilet. Men and women alike went barefooted sandals came later.

A girl was usually betrothed at an early age. Her chief importance after marriage was to look after her husband's animals when she was not caring for her children. There has always been an exchange of money between the families of the bride and groom. In lower Egypt today, the prospective groom pays two-thirds of an agreed sum and the remainder in the event of divorce. Out of this initial payment the bride's family supplies her dowry.

For weddings and other ceremonies a gold thread border was interwoven at the hem and about the neck of dresses. Falling draperies served as sleeves. In order to keep property in the family and prevent scattering of large estates brothers and sisters or uncles and nieces often intermarried. This custom is still practiced in some districts of the country.

"TWO FLOORS OF GOOD THINGS TO WEAR"

Adventures In The Library

By ARNOLD MULDER

A NEGLECTED "REVOLUTIONARY FATHER"

When I was a school boy and until years after I had come to manhood all I knew about Tom Paine, author of "Common Sense," the "The Crisis" and "The Rights of Man," and "The Age of Reason," was that he wrote the sentence, "These are the times that try men's souls," and that he was an atheist.

I wonder if the schoolboy of today knows any more about him than that? I suspect that he does not, and it is likely that most groups who do not know much more about this Revolutionary "patriot" who took his honorable part in making America free. We know all about Washington and Franklin and Hamilton and Jefferson and Nathan Hale and a score of others and we respect their names with respect and love, but Tom Paine remains in the shadowland almost of myth. It is likely that many an American is not quite sure whether he was a real person like Washington and the rest or whether he was merely a character in a book.

SLANDER NEVER DIED

Why? In the answer to that question lies a curious example of mass psychology and the effect of a slander once started that can almost never be wholly corrected. We of today are not doing honor to the author of "Common Sense" and "The Crisis," to the patriot who was one of the first to put his neck in danger and to the man who helped the American cause not only with his pen but because he did not agree with the religious sentiments of the people of his day.

His enemies charged him with being an atheist because he did not agree with their theology and that charge of atheism has clung to him for a century and a half, although sober history shows that the charge is not correct. Not content with that, his enemies charged him with being a drunkard. Again the sober facts of history do not substantiate the charge. It was merely a means of those who did not like his ideas on theology of discrediting him with the public.

If one can forget these prejudices that were engendered in an age of rather narrow religious ideas and that have clung to Paine ever since it is a real adventure to read one of his books today. There is a thrill in reading such a book—a pamphlet rather, because that is what it is as "Common Sense," that cannot be got from history written after the event. "Common Sense," was written in the heat of the controversy. The man who wrote it had more than an academic interest in his subject. By writing and publishing it he was putting his head in danger and at the moment it was much more likely that America would lose the struggle than win it. Reading such a document it is almost possible to recreate the time in which it was penned.

INVITED HANGING

And the man who wrote it was a bold man. He called a spade a spade and he was not afraid to say that the king business was a fraud and that kings were impostors. For that alone he would have gone to the gallows if the English had won the war.

But there is another source of interest in such a document. The reader finds in it here and there ideas that have since become famous through other men. For instance, the famous "entangling alliances" idea Washington first gave wide currency and that, during the recent league of nations fight, was always invoked by the enemies of the league in the name of the "father of his country." Tom Paine said in "Common Sense," substantially what is today still looked upon as Washington's invention.

The ruling passion of Tom Paine's life was liberty. He came to America from England only a year before the Revolutionary War opened and straightway threw in his lot with the colonists against his native country. After America was free he threw in his lot with France, going so far as to become a naturalized Frenchman for the sake of fighting for French liberty. And in "The Age of Reason" he fought for intellectual liberty and mankind has not yet forgiven him for this.

The Question Box

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing The Appleton Post-Crescent Information Bureau, Frederick J. Haskin, Editor, Washington, D. C. This offer applies strictly to information. The Bureau cannot give advice on legal, medical, and financial matters. It does not attempt to solve domestic troubles but to undertake exhaustive research on any subject. Write your question plainly and briefly. Give full name and address and enclose two cents in stamps for return postage. All replies are sent direct to the inquirer.)

A. The address of the Mother's Day International Association is 203 North 12th St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The president is Anna Jarvis.

Q. Do elephants breed in captivity? L. A.

A. The National Zoological Park says that elephants do breed in captivity. In fact, Princess Alice, an elephant in the City Park at St. Louis, gave birth to a baby elephant in 1913. Within recent years several elephants have been born in Copenhagen, Denmark. The period of gestation is 32 months.

Q. What are the requirements for jury service? M. M. S.

A. To serve on a grand jury a man must be 21 years of age but under 65, must be able to read, write and understand English, must be a citizen of the United States and a resident of the county within which the jury and is to act, and must not have been convicted of any crime involving moral turpitude.

The Tangle

It was nearly a week, however, Ruth, before Jack acted as though he had forgotten what he had asked me about you. In the meantime it was very uncomfortable around our house.

He did not pay a particle of attention about little Jack, because you see I had countered his inquiries about you with inquiries about little Jack's parentage and that always brings the blood to Jack's face.

I wonder if I had a woman friend that I would protect her as Jack does Sydney Carton. Some day he will have to tell me all about this Paula Perier's and Sydney's affair but just now there is nothing that makes him so angry as any reference to it.

In time, however, Jack began to act as though he had dismissed you and your affairs as trivial. I think in his own mind he had come to the conclusion that Harry had sent you some money and with my connivance you had kept it from his creditors. So you see where you get off with him after he finds you prowling around in my safety vault trying to deposit a nice roll of bills—that safely deposited vault in which he is not privileged to intrude.

I am so glad you have the pearl, dear, but to tell the truth I wish Karl Whitney had them—had never been so silly as to have given them to me. I don't know why I did not send them to Alice. That would have saved me a heap of trouble.

Before I come home I am going to try and see if I can buy back those pearls I sold. Then I can send the whole string back to Karl and he can give them to whom he pleases.

Of course I shall have to tell Jack that I lost them or make up some other story to account for their loss. I wonder, dear, if such foolish little mistakes as Karl's giving me this string of pearls can make such great perils in the married life of other people.

You see, everything is perfectly legitimate and all right about them.

There is no other man considered in the case. The triangle is just Leslie and Jack and a string of pearl beads. It is really to laugh, dear, and yet I have a premonition that some day something is going to happen that will make me wish I had never seen them.

Dad and mother left yesterday and after I have made the purchases you wish me to make for the shop and looked up my chances of getting the pearls back, I shall leave for home. Presume I will leave tomorrow morning.

Our friend Prissy (what a lovely name that is for her) has returned to Mother Prescott with all her venom intact, for I do not see her about the hotel any more.

I want you to meet that nice Englishman that I wrote you about. He says he is coming to our town. You will like him, Ruth. He is a real man. Until I see you,

Lovingly,

LESLIE.

How to Relieve Neuritis

If you want genuine, lasting relief from those keen, darting pains of neuritis, you must first restore the diseased nerves to sound, healthy condition. It usually centers its attack about the shoulder or nape of the neck, in the forearm, thigh or leg, and sometimes in the small of the back.

For real relief, procure a bottle of Epsa Neuritis Tablets from your druggist and take two tablets before each meal. The result will amaze you. Never in your life have you used anything like these marvelous tablets.

Epsa Neuritis Tablets contain no habit-forming drugs—no narcotics. Perfectly harmless to every one. Price, $1.00. Sold in Appleton by Volgt's Drug Store and all other leading druggists. Boericke & Runyon Co., Mfrs., San Francisco, adv.

KAUKAUNA FORCES OSHKOSH TO WORK HARD FOR ITS WIN

Gertz Pitches Strong Game Until Sixth When Durhams Get to Him

Kaukauna—Oshkosh state league baseball players earned a 6 to 2 victory over Kaukauna's home players in a fast game Sunday afternoon at Oshkosh ball park. The Oshkosh club scored a run in the first and second rounds and three in the sixth and one in the seventh after Kromer's youngsters had tied the count at two all in the sixth frame.

Raymond Gertz, Stormy's young moundman, occupied his position until the middle of the sixth round. He allowed five hits in the first two innings and then sent Oshkosh down in order until the sixth when he weakened. Three hits were registered and when Gertz threw three wide balls to Runke he was relieved by Kilster. Kilster shot Runke two fast strikes but he felled on the third one and Runke walked. Smith followed with a single which scored the second and third runs of the inning.

Kaukauna boys played a 100 percent better game Sunday. They were credited with only two miscues. There were, however, a few ivory plays which helped Oshkosh score three of its markers. Smith worked for Oshkosh on the rubber and allowed the Electric City three hits.

A base on balls, Stumpf's single, Gertz's single and Graby's screaming sacrifice fly to deep right would have been a triple but for the heavy wind, resulted in Kaukauna's two markers in the sixth inning. In other innings they were unable to connect with Smith's fast ones.

A game made playing exceedingly difficult. It was almost impossible to judge a high fly. Not more than 450 fans attended the game.

Kaukauna—The Kaukauna Corners of the Home Players Baseball League walked away with Hortonville 21 to 8 in a one-sided contest on the local grounds Sunday afternoon. Francols, of the north side millard team, worked behind the log for the Corners and Stormy will keep his eye on the youngster.

Ellsworth Hodgins, a veteran of many battles, is managing the Hortonville team.

PUPILS IN RURAL SCHOOLS PREPARE FOR ATHLETIC MEET

Youngsters Compete for Two Loving Cups Offered by Post-Crescent

Friday, May 23, will be a gala day for Outagamie county rural schools, for that will be the second annual county field day when the best school athletes of each township in the county will come to Appleton to compete for the Post-Crescent Individual trophy cup and the county trophy cup, also donated by the Appleton Post-Crescent.

The field day was inaugurated last year and proved such a success that A. G. Meating, county superintendent, and A. L. Collar and Miss Nellie McDermott, supervising teachers, decided to repeat it this year. The winner of the individual cup last year was George Krickelberg of Badger school, Grand Chute. Knowledge Hill school of Horton and Badger school were tied for the county school cup, and divided the possession of the cup for a half year each. The county school cup will become the permanent property of any school that wins it three years in succession. The small cup won for individuals becomes the property of the pupil winning it.

ALL KINDS OF GAMES

County field day will be divided into two periods. In the forenoon, parents, teachers and pupils will indulge in games and sports not related to the competition for the cups. There will be tug of war both for boys and girls, ball driving contests for women, community games and contests and a novel game called "Forty Ways of Getting There." There are forty different ways in which a person can go from a given place to a goal. This will be a test of the children's ingenuity. Each pupil must invent a different way of reaching the goal, such as walking, hopping, rolling, etc. The afternoon field meet program will consist of a 100-yard dash, standing broad jump, running broad jump, baseball throw for distance, baseball throw for accuracy, running high jump for boys; a 75-yard dash, standing broad jump, potato race, baseball throw for distance, basketball throw for distance for girls; a one-half mile relay race for boys and girls, and a foot race for teachers. The last mentioned race, however, will not count for the prizes.

The pupil winning an event is credited with five points, the pupil receiving second place receives three points and the third person will be given one point. The person winning the greatest number of points wins the small Post-Crescent trophy cup, and the school whose pupil wins for it the greatest number of points will be awarded the county Post-Crescent trophy cup. Medals or badges will be given to winners of first, second and third places of each event.

Contests are open to all rural schools and two department state graded schools. A school may not enter more than one pupil in each event, except in relay races which may have five entries from each school. The winning relay team will be given a pennant.

Town elimination contests were held all over the county in April when the winners of the various events were selected to represent the towns.

Deciphering Signatures On Bank Checks Is Art Which Bankers Must Learn

"The higher the position they have, the worse their signatures." So say the bank tellers and bookkeepers in banks when they get to talking about the way people sign their names to their checks. Peculiar check and letter signatures are not merely a matter of poor penmanship, however, but are an insurance against forgery, they say.

"Bank presidents and cashiers have almost unreadable signatures with which they sign checks," said one teller. "With considerable practice, their signatures become so individual that only the most clever of forgers could imitate them. The less like the man's name his signature appears to be, the less chance there is that it can be copied by any but an expert. Some of the checks that come to us with cashiers' names signed to them are absolutely unreadable."

DOESN'T INDICATE SCHOOLING

"Education has nothing to do with legibility of hand writing," claims another teller. "You take the way most of the college students write and compare them with laboring men's signatures and the laboring men's efforts are the more legible. Until we get used to signatures, they do puzzle but then we always have the cards which the depositor fills out when he opens his account."

Prohibition has brought about an embarrassing situation for the bank bookkeepers. On several occasions what appeared to be forged signatures have proved upon investigation to be the real "John Hancock's" made when the men were not quite steady. Some of these are pretty poor excuses for the usual name.

FORGET SIGNATURE
Occasionally it happens that a check will come into a bank without any signature. Sometimes it gets as far along the line as the bookkeeping department, but usually it can be traced to the writer because the checks have an individuality in the way they are dated and the amounts are written in. These are checked with little difficulty over the telephone.

There are few people who have checking accounts who cannot sign their names and therefore have to make a mark. Savings accounts of this kind are more common. Even a man without hands who has a local account is able to write by holding a pencil between the stubs of his arms.

DIFFERENT STYLES

That men and women have a different style in hand writing and that they seldom mistake a woman's writing for a man's is the opinion of the men who watch names on checks. While a man's hand writing may be small it usually has a distinctly masculine appearance. It is their belief that few women's signatures are as bold and distinctive as men's.

"Some people who write legibly enough have other marks of distinction that might be overlooked by the amateur forger," said still another of the bank clerks. "We have" one man who dots his "i's" and makes his periods in small circles rather than the usual dot. Some people have a little flourish at the end of

Paul Woldt of the town of Freedom, whose barn was burned Wednesday evening, has a new structure well under way, with the generous help of relatives, friends and neighbors. ## SO BIG

By Edna Ferber

His face lighted up with a sudden thought. "Tell you what, my place is just this side of the school, next to Bout's place. I could start for you the first morning, in the school, and then the pump and bring in a pair of water. This month, and January, and February, and part of March, even, now I don't go to market on account of the winter. I could start you the first, till spring. And I could come maybe three times a week, evenings, to Pool's place, for lessons." He looked so helpless, so humble, so huge, and the more pathetic for his hugeness.

She felt a little rush of warmth toward him that was at once impersonal and maternal. She thought again, "Why, the dear thing! The great helpless big thing! How serious he is! And so funny, with the ridiculous cup cake in his great hand, his eyes wide and ruminant, his face ruddier than ever, his forehead knotted with earnestness. She laughed, suddenly, a gay little laugh, and he after a puzzled pause, joined her companionably.

"Three evenings a week," repeated Selma, then, from the depths of her ignorance. "Why, I'd love to. I'd love to."

The evenings turned out to be Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays. Supper was over by six-thirty in the Pool household. Pervus was there by seven, very clean as to shirt, his hair brushed till it shone, and even dropping his hat, and jumping against chairs, and looking solemn. Selma was torn between pity and mirth. If only he had blundered. A blustering big man puts the world on the defensive. A gentle giant disarms it.

Selma got out her McBride's grammar and Duffy's Arithmetic, and together they started to parse verbs, paper walls, dig ciphers, and extract square roots. They found study impossible at the otherworldly light on table, with the Pool household edging about it. Jakob built a fire in the parlour stove and there they sat, teacher and pupil, their feet resting cooily on the gleaming nickel railing that encircled the wood burner. On the evening of the first lesson Roelf had glowered throughout supper and had disappeared into the workshop, whence issued a great sound of hammering, sawing, and general clatter. He and Selma had got into the way of spending much time together, in or out of doors. They skated on Vander Slide's pond, together with the shrieking pagels that coasted on the little slope that led down from Kuypers' woods to the main road, using blades that had been put together by Roelf. On bad days they roared or studied. Not Sundays, merely, but many weekday evenings were spent thus. Selma was determined that Roelf should break away from the uncouth green of the countryside; that he should at least share with her the somewhat sketchy knowledge gained at Miss Fister's select school. She, the woman of almost twenty, never talked down to this boy of twelve. The boy was indeed her inarticulate child, but he had early discovered that he had a feeling for beauty—beauty of line, texture, color, and group—and was rare in one of his years. The fact of a satin ribbon in his fingers, the warts and the pips of a sunset, the folds of the winered cashmere dress, the cadence of a spoken line, brought a look to his face that startled her. She had a battered volume of Tennyson. When first she read him the line beginning "Eldene the fair, Eldene the lovely," he had uttered a little exclamation. She, glancing up from her book, had found his eyes wide, bright, and full of joy in his own dark face.

"What is it, Roelf?"

He had flushed. "I didn't say nothing—anything. Start over again how it goes, Eldene."

She had begun again the fragment line. "Eldene the fair, Eldene the lovely."

Since the gathering at Ooms's hall he had been moody and sullen; had refused to answer when she spoke to him of his bid for her basket. Urged, he would only say, "Oh, it was just fun to make old Ooms mad."

Now, with the advent of Pervus DeJong, Roelf presented that most touching and miserable of spectacles, a small boy jealous and helpless in his jealousy. Selma had asked him to join the tri-weekly evening lessons; had, indeed, insisted that he be a pupil in the class round the parlour stove. Maartje had said, on the night of Pervus DeJong's first visit, "Roelf, you sit, too, and learn. Is good for you to learn out of books the way teacher says." Klaas Pool, too, had approved the plan, since it would cost nothing and, furthermore, would in no way interfere with Roelf's farm work. "Sure, learn," he said with a large gesture.

Roelf would not. He behaved very tediously; slammed doors, whistled, soufled in the kitchen floor, made many mysterious trips through the parlour up the stairs that led off that room, ascending with a clatter; incited Gertrude and Jozina to quarrels and tears; had the household in a hubbub; stumbled over Dunder, the dog, so that that anguished animal's yelps were added to the din.

Selma was frantic. Lessons were impossible amidst this uproar. "It has never been like this before," she assured Pervus, almost tearfully. "I don't know what's the matter. It's awful."

Pervus had looked up from his slate. His eyes were calm, his lips smiling. "Is all right. In my house is too still, evenings. Next time it goes better, you see."

Next time it did go better. Roelf disappeared into his workshop after supper; did not emerge until after De Jong's departure.

There was something about the sight of this great creature bent laboriously over a slate, the pencil held daintily in his huge fingers, that moved Selma strangely. Pity wracked her. If she had known to what emotion this pity was akin she might have taken away the slate and given him a tablet, and the whole course of her life would have been different. "Poor lad," she thought, "Poor lad." Childed herself for being amused at his childlike earnestness.

He did not make an apt pupil. Though painstaking. Usually the top draught of the stove was open, and the glow of the fire imparted to his face and head a certain rosy glow. He was very grave. His brow wore a troubled frown. Selma would go over a problem or a sentence again and again, patiently, patiently. Then, suddenly, like a hand passed over his face, his smile would come, transforming it. He had white strong teeth, too small, and perhaps not so white as they had seemed because of his rustic bluntness. He would smile like a child, and Selma should have been warned by the warm rush of joy that his smile gave her. She would smile, too. He was as poised as though he had made a fresh and wonderful discovery.

"It's easy, he would say. 'When you know it once like a boy.' He usually was. Some by eight, thirty or nine. After the Pool's went to bed before he left. After he had gone Selma was wakened. She would hear water and wash brush her hair vigorously, feeling at once buoyant and depressed.

Sometimes they fell to talking. His wife had died in the second year of their marriage, when the child was born. The child, too, had died. A girl. He was unlucky, like that. It was the same with the farm.

He had flushed. "I didn't say nothing—anything. Start over again how it goes, Eldene."

She had begun again the fragment line. "Eldene the fair, Eldene the lovely."

PAPERMAKERS HUMBLE FONDY, 6 TO 1, IN OPENER

APPLETON HIGH TAKES FIRST IN TRACK CARNIVAL

Appleton Takes Lead Of Six Runs In First And Holds Reds To One

Stack Allows But Two Hits During Contest While His Mates Connect with Six of Jones' Offerings.

Appleton Sunday afternoon swamped Louis Fard's Fond du Lac Redlegs, 6 to 1, in the first home game of the season at Brandt park here. A high wind made play difficult, and out down the attendance to about 400. The Papermakers piled up their six runs in the first inning off two passes, a hit batsman, an error and two two-baggers. (and after that took things easy, but held the Redlegs scoreless up to the seventh when an error by Amby Welsgerber allowed Zinke to turn his two-base hit into the only run tallied by the Redlegs.

Stack worked well despite the wind, retiring eight hostile batters by the strikeout route and allowing but two hits. Meanwhile the Papermakers garnered six safeties. Amby Jones, Marty Lamers and Babbinas, a Milwaukee semi-pro who took Wenzel's place behind the log, each poled a two-bagger in the initial stanza, and each brought in a man. The Appleton team batted around in the opening inning but registered only one hit besides the two doubles. Stack poled a single but died on first when Brielmaier struck out on his second time up in the inning.

The invaders connected with one of Stack's offerings for the first time in the third inning in the third when Fard slammed out a two-bagger to Len Smith in centerfield, with two men retired. When Amby Welsgerber stopped a fast one hot off Steen's bat, Fard's two-bagger was wasted and the slide retired.

MAYOR OPENS GAME

Fard started proceedings when he struck at Mayor John Goodland's offering which opened the game. He swung at several of Stack's twisters and connected with one which Marty Lamers stopped and shot to Fard. Welsgerber easily deceived by Stack's stuff and retired in short order. Welsgerber picked up Zinke's grounder, and Fond du Lac had lost its first chance.

Jones got off to a bad start when he passed Brielmaier and forced him to second by hitting Marty Lamers with a pitch. Durain booted Sylvester's fly which he misjudged in the wind, and a walk for Bergringer forced in the first run of the game. Ted Lamers slammed out a two-bagger which sent Marty and Sylvester home and put Bergringer on third. Jones came to life after this and struck out Len Smith and Welsgerber in rapid succession. Babbinas connected with his next offering for two hits, which brought Bergringer and Ted Lamers home. Stack was responsible for another run when his single gave Babbinas a chance to cross the rubber. Brielmaier struck out on his second time up and Stack died on first.

SPEED MAKES DOUBLE STEAL

Brielmaier's fumble of a high fly put Speer on first after Durain had popped one into Len Smith's waiting hands, and Speer stole second and third while Klevonow was at bat. However he got no further, for Klevonow poled a high one to Ted Lamers, and Stack stopped McLaughlin's grounder and beat him to first with the throw.

During the next few innings nothing happened to swell the scores. Sylvester reached third on two safeties and an error but died there. In the seventh Zinke slammed a slider across third and reached second before it was stopped. He got to third when Speer chipped one to Stack who beat him to first, and crossed the home plate when Welsgerber fumbled the ball after Marty Lamers had stopped Klevonow's slider and shot it to him.

Neither side threatened to score after the seventh and no one got beyond first.

YOUNG STRIBLING WILL MEET WALKER

Kansas City, Mo.—Hughie Walker, of Kansas City, has been selected as the opponent for Young Stribling, Georgia light heavyweight boxer who will make his western debut in a ten round bout in Kansas City, Kas., on June 3, during the national Shrine convention. It was announced Sunday night. Walker has fought many of the leading heavyweights of the country.

ROD AND REEL

M. J. V. FOSE

HOW TO BAIT CAST PART II.

When retrieving the line after the cast has been made, the rod should be pointed to the right or left of a straight line to the lure and never straight upward. This allows the rod to bear part of the strain of the striking fish.

The failure of most novices at the bait tossing game is mostly due to the fact that they become discouraged because they cannot cast a long distance like an "old timer" and try to stretch the cast farther than it should be. This will cause many backlashes. A simple twist will take the bait out easily, so take it easy, and start at 25 feet until you have mastered this distance with accuracy and then place your target ten feet farther back.

A lot of beginners think that bait casting can be mastered in 30 minutes, but this is a mistake and the beginner will have to concentrate and practice if he intends to become successful.

Here are a few hints that may help the novice and might be an enlightenment to the "old timer" who has never found out why he draws so many backlashes.

When making the cast hold the reel plate with the handle protruding perpendicularly and as the line slows down, gradually twist the reel to its proper position for retrieving.

Take good care of your reel and oil it every time it is used. An oiled reel carried in a kit is handy for cleaning it off before using again. The reel too, should be wiped dry and the oiled rag wiped over its surface to keep it in good condition. Always keep a rod in a cool place so the ferules do not dry out.

Always retrieve your lure the minute it strikes the water as fish will not take an artificial lure unless it resembles something alive.

GREEN BAY DEFEATS MILWAUKEE GIANTS

Green Bay — The Green Bay State leaguers had little trouble turning back the McCoy-Nolan Giants of Milwaukee here on Sunday by a score of 11 to 3. The game drew a fair sized crowd despite the winter wind. Earl Howard had the colored boys pretty well tamed although at times woefully support had him in hot water. A pitch swat by Chief Williams with the bases full featured the combat.

midweekers with a strong following in Wisconsin fistic circles. The preliminaries have not been announced but Hugh Minahan, lawyer and fight promoter, promises a strong prelude.

JOHNNY DUNDEE FACES HARD JOB

New York—Johnny Dundee has bitten off quite a chunk in taking on Luis Vicentini at the Velodrome on May 28. Vicentini did not stop either Shugrue or Moran, but he had them dizzy dozens of times. Can Dundee stand up under such punching at this late date? That's the question. Vicentini hits every man he fights. He hits hard. If Dundee can still absorb thump shocks and go to win as his speed and cleverness can win for him, then we'll have to doff our hats. He whizzed by Leonard, who was not by this fellow?

Copenhagen — The Danish tennis team eliminated Hungary from the Davis cup contests.

Talking It Over

BABE RUTH AND MRS. BABE

The above picture shows Babe Ruth—possibly you've heard of the gentleman—and Mrs. Babe in some sort of deep, earnest discussion. Presumably the subject is baseball. Very likely it concerns home runs. What else would a great home-run hitter and a great home-run hitter's wife be discussing?

Mrs. Ruth has probably said to Mr. Ruth: "Gee whiz, Babe, you aren't socking the old apple half as hard as I looked for you to do this year. What's ailing you, anyhow?"

And you can just hear Mr. Ruth, in his fine old optimistic way, answering: "Honey, just you wait, I'll get going yet and show these hams what home-run hitting really is."

But what they really said, according to the unromantic photographer, who brought the picture into our office, was this:

The Babe: "Well, hurry up and shoot, I don't wanna miss my time at bat."

Mrs. Babe: "Heaven sakes! Why don't you let a body know you're going to take pictures? I look terrible in this hat."

Diamond Siftings

The opening day crowd was a disappointment, even considering the weather. Not much more than a corporal's guard saw the state leaguers perform for the first time on the home lot this year.

Dave Smith's big pitcher had an easy afternoon and should be credited with a shutout against Fond du Lac. Welsgerber's error in the seventh inning, when he dropped a perfect heater to first for the last out, permitted a hostile to cross the pen with the invaders' only tally. Stack let the victors down with two hits, one of which was a high ball lost in the sun.

Umpire Hannon had a difficult afternoon but he was responsible for most of his troubles. His cueing of balls and strikes was funny when it was not tragic and he had to stand for a lot of trading from the crowd and a lot of kicking and hard looks from the ball players.

Appleton high school Saturday took first place in the first annual track and field meet of the Fox River Valley conference held under the auspices of the Lawrence College Athletic association here, with 42 points to its credit. Manitowoc placed second with 27 points, Sheboygan third with 17. West Green Bay fourth with 15, East Green Bay fifth with 13 and Marinette sixth with 11.

The winners were awarded a large silver loving cup for first place, donated by Lawrence college. An individual cup awarded by Sniders Restaurant here was won by Donald Hyde of Appleton and Belongie of West Green Bay, who were tied for high score. As the cup could not be split, the "L" club of Lawrence offered to donate another identical cup so that each man might be satisfied.

The Appleton relay team won a large banner donated by the Peterson Bauer Printing Co.

Athletes taking first, second and third place received gold, silver and bronze medals respectively, which were furnished through the bounty of Appleton merchants and business enterprises who lacked the medal.

ALL SHOW CLASS

The youngsters made an excellent showing considering the short time available for practice, and the attendance proved that interest in the revived sport is high. More than 500 students were at Lawrence field, cheering their representatives on in the various events.

Some of the runners were especially good. Donald and Douglas Hyde, a pair of Appleton twins, finished the 100-yard dash almost side by side, in the form of veterans. Neither of the two appeared to be even breathed, and were in the lead by a good margin when Donald broke the tape. Some of the longer runs called for an unusual amount of grit and endurance. A few of the youthful speedsters collapsed at the finish after the final spurt. Skoracki of Manitowoc, who won both the mile and halfmile took it easy in the first few laps, but speeded up on the home stretch and easily outdistanced the field.

Tuttrup and Neller of Appleton were tied for first in the pole vault. They displayed remarkable ability in going across, and evidently were still going across when the 9 ft. 4 in. mark eliminated all other contestants. They will decide who gets the gold and silver medals in the inter-school meet planned for the near future.
